CONTENTS

Articles

Chris Madsen, Social Democrat Space on Vancouver's Contested Waterfront: Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Union (CIO) Organizing Amongst Sugar and Grain Workers 1946-1949 /113

Nicolas Landry, Tensions, diplomatie et accommodements dans un espace partagé entre Saint-Pierre-et-Miquelon et Terre-Neuve, 1816-1842 /143

Robert M. Browning Jr., "The highest traditions of any service": The US Coast Guard's attempt to save the British Collier Wellington /163

Review Essay

Cavell, Janice. Documents on Canadian External Relations: The Arctic, 1874-1949 and Kikkert, Peter and P. Whitney Lackenbauer, eds. Legal Appraisals of Canada’s Arctic Sovereignty: Key Documents, 1905-56 by Elizabeth B. Elliot-Meisel /175

Book Reviews

John A. Anderson. This Noble Ship and Others by Jan Drent /185

David Bilton (ed.) Sea and Air Fighting. Those Who Were There by Robert L. Shoop /186

Gary Burns. Shipmates. The Men of LCS 52 in World War II by Brandi Carrier /187
All the major contributors to this issue are old friends of CNRS and NASOH and also former contributors. It is a pleasure to welcome them all back to this issue.

Chris Madsen, now a Vancouver resident, is well known as a student of west coast maritime matters. His most recent contribution, (in the January 2016 issue) examined Vancouver waterfront labour in relation to the experiences of the important twentieth century Canadian politician, J.S. Woodsworth. He is a member of the faculty at the Canadian Forces Command and Staff College.

Nicolas Landry published «Les pêches canadiennes au XIXe siècle» in 1992, in the second volume of the journal. His most recent contribution, in 2015, was awarded an honourable mention by the CNRS awards committee. He has also served as a member of the editorial board. Here he continues his examination of the east coast fishery. He is a senior member of faculty at the Université de Moncton, Shippagan campus.

Robert Browning published “Always Ready - The Revenue Cutter Service and the great San Francisco earthquake” in 2007. He is a retired chief historian of the United States Coast Guard, and a member of NASOH. His research note offered here looks at one of the most important events of the USCG during the First World War.

Finally, we have a review article by Elizabeth Elliot-Meisel. A long standing member of faculty at Creighton University in Omaha, Nebraska, she has also been a long time member of CNRS, and is a former member of the editorial board.

It is always a pleasure to offer my thanks to the team who have put the issue together. In addition to “the usual suspects,” well known to everyone I am sure, I am happy to acknowledge to work of Bruno LeGal. In addition to his regular translations of abstract, he provided material assistance for the article by Nicolas Landry.

William Glover
May, 2017